Pus Cells in Urine: Normal Range, Causes, Tests, and Treatment: You may have seen pus cells, an off-white fluid that secretes from the injured site, usually from a popped pimple. Excess pus from any incision or wound indicates you have suffered an infection, which your immune system is actively fighting. Simply put, it's a sign your white blood cells have fought the infection successfully.

Pus in the urine is called pyuria. Some of it is considered normal, as these are just the dead white blood cells, but if they are found in excess, you might need to get the screening.
